Research on Professional Responsibility and Ethics in Accounting publishes high-quality research and cases which focus on the professional responsibilities of accountants and how they deal with the ethical issues they face. Covering timely issues such as social responsibility and ethical judgement, the series brings together a range of articles exploring the professional responsibilities of accountants, codes of conduct which affect them, and securities regulations. Compliance with professional guidelines is judgement-based and the characteristics of the individual, the culture in which they operate, and situations all affect how these guidelines are interpreted and applied, as well as when they might be violated. This volume researches the nature of the interactions between accountants, regulators and standard setters, the dilemmas that occur and investigate how and why accountants resolve them.

In this collection of eight chapters, mostly US and Canadian contributors in accounting, finance, and business examine current research and cases on ethical issues in the field of accounting. Some specific topics include corporate social responsibility, the influence of PCAOB regulatory guidance on the internal control audit process, auditor-client disagreements and independence, and the impact of culture and training on code of conduct effectiveness. The final chapter takes a lighter approach with a comparison of the academic accounting profession and the National Football League. The book is distributed in North America by Turpin Distribution. --copy;2014 Ringgold Inc. Portland, OR (protoview.com)About the AuthorCynthia Jeffrey - Iowa State University, USA
